Six million California workers – 40% of our workforce – do not have a single paid sick day. Every day workers are forced to choose between a paycheck and caring for their own health or for a sick family member. The time has come for change.

- ◆ San Francisco paved the way for paid sick days in 2006 and Washington DC joined the movement two years later. In November 2008 Milwaukee voters rallied to a landslide victory for paid sick days on the ballot. States across the country are organizing for paid sick days. The national movement is growing and California is poised to be a leader.
- ◆ According to a 2008 Field Research Corporation poll, three in four California voters support a law to guarantee all workers the right to earn paid sick days – across demographic, economic, ethnic and party lines. Californians agree that paid sick days is the right policy for our families and workplaces.
- ◆ The best available public health evidence shows that paid sick days would have significant positive public health impacts: reducing the spread of the flu, protecting the public from diseases carried by sick workers, preventing hunger and homelessness among sick low-income workers, and enabling workers to stay home to care for sick family members. Paid sick days makes sense for a healthy California.

Show your support for this commonsense policy and help make paid sick days a reality for all California workers. Over the next year, you can help the campaign by:

- ◆ Joining your name to the growing list of organizations that support paid sick days.
- ◆ Sending the California legislature a letter of support for paid sick days.
- ◆ Spreading the word about paid sick days to your members, colleagues and constituents.
- ◆ Speaking out at hearings, public events, or to the press in support of paid sick days.
- ◆ Joining our network to stay informed of campaign events and updates.
- ◆ Rallying your community to join the campaign.
